WE SALUTE OUR CAPTAIN

We, the midshipmen of the crew, salute our Captain Mr. Paul Haller, who has been our guide, our teacher, and, upon occasions, our chastiser. In this capacity he has successfully navigated our steamer on the high seas and brought it safely into port.

Having charted the course of the S. S. Anlibrum, these salts stood first watch. Cries of "Ship Ahoy!" and "Reef to Starboard" were heard frequently from the crow's nest as they sighted obstacles. Bloomin' proud of themselves, they were, for a job done well, when they finally put into port.

CREW '38 EARNS FEASTS AND PAPERS

After safely plowing the rough waves of the Sea of Education for three years, the midshipmen, crew '38, sighted land and a good harbor. Their colors, black and white, had flown triumphantly in the intramural basketball and track championship contest in '55.

Electing officers was the first event on the last leg of their voyage. Next they called all hands on deck to see them present "Lady Spitfire." A swing in the ship's salon started the winter social season.

After a few months' calm, broken only by work on the Anlibrum and by appointments to the National Honor Society, they celebrated passing the navy boards. Not being superstitious, they gave a banquet on Friday, May 15. At sunrise one May morning, the faculty became galley slaves and gave these worthy seamen a breakfast.

All feasting over, crew '38 marched into the auditorium to hear parting words of advice by Dr E. Burns Martin. At Commencement services they received their papers entitling them to a shipmaster's berth.

The Able Bodied Seamen whose officers are: Carl Aschliman, president; Robert Haller, vice-president; Pauline Johnson, secretary; Byron Oswald, treasurer; Charles W. Eickhoff, adviser, scorned the rough sea by giving a Scavenger Hunt and Wiener Bake.

These energetic sailors next won the magazine subscription campaign and were released from their duties on watch to give a party and program for their own crew. Byron Oswald, Bob Haller, Peggy Felger, and Rosemary Pond were star salesmen.

Candy sales by Joyce Albert and Annie Laurie Parter poured money into their sea chest so that our liner salon became a Hawaiian Paradise the night of the Junior Prom. As the orchestra struck up "Anchors Aweigh," Peggy Felger, Kathleen Scott, Dawna Hunt, Loraine Hess, Mary Jane Wilkie, and Pauline Johnson led the grand march, followed by Queen Betty Meyer. The dancing began after the queen had been crowned by the class president.

Crew '59 also proved their ability to steer the ship by having more of their mates on the honor roll than any other crew and by their enthusiastic support of all cruise organizations.

THE ORDINARY SEAMEN GO TO SEA TO SKATE

The Ordinary Seamen chose as their officers: Wendell Fusselman, president; Luther Sandwick, vice-president; Jean Kortokrax, secretary; Donald Connett, treasurer; Matilda Auman, adviser.

To demonstrate their skill in handling gear and appliances, these sophomore seamen started the cruise by skating and gyrating on the promenade deck and in five months celebrated their second leave from duties by an additional exhibit of skating skill.

THE ORDINARY SEAMEN LEARN NAUTICAL TERMS

Top Row: Warren Rowe, Charles Ness, Louis Lepper, Bill Siebold, Wendell Fusselman, Stanley Gongaware, Bill Nycum, Arthur Sheets, Omer Brinker.

Second Row: Ralph Gutmann, Bob Kahlenbeck, Pauline Hugenell, Edith Smallback, John Snyder, Jean Buskirk, Hazel Goldsberry, Vernon Foulks, Max Merrill.

Anticipating the privilege of becoming the coast guard for next year's sports, Vernon Foulks, Wendell Fusselman, Arthur Sheets, Melvin Sheets, Nelson Millhouse, and Calvin Deam made a fine record in sports during this cruise.

For learning the parts of the ship, the following seamen were on the semester honor roll: Elsie Swank, Wendell Fusselman, Maxine Brim, Almeda Cox, Calvin Deam, Alice de la Motte, Laura Jane Foltz, Betty Miller, Luther Sandwick, John Snyder, Homer Hoke, and Lenora Ankenbruck.

PLEBES MAINTAIN TRUE MIDSHIPMITE SPIRIT

Top Row: Marjorie Webster, Adine Gebhart, Valetta Gebhart, Phyllis Scott, Dorothy Gutmann, Marjorie Fremion, Betty Busse, Veronica Rulka, Catherine Beerman, Loretta Reichart, Joyce Sonners, Geraldine Haag, Wilma Brim.

The Plebes joined the Crew with Fred Link president; Beth Feagles, vice-president; Phyllis Scott, secretary-treasurer; Howard Wisner, adviser.

The Deck Boys' first celebration of menial tasks well done was a skating party held in the steamer's rink. Knowing that after a three month furlough, they would return as "Ordinary Seamen," they brought their service to a close with a Kid Party abaft midship.

PLEBES MAKE GOOD DECK SWABBERS

“No wind that blew dismayed the crew or troubled the captain’s mind.”

The “shark scarers” organized themselves for the purpose of defense against the mutiny of their fellow passengers. While on dry dock, the band participated in a Music Festival and a Band Concert. Hopes are high for the spring Band Contests. May the band do as well as last year when it won a trophy for the best all-round marching band in the state and each member received a medal.

The schooner, "Orchestra," unfortunately ran aground during a squall this season, and is therefore out of commission until sufficient bi-weekly rehearsals make her seaworthy. Her brave showing last spring at the Band and Orchestra contest was rewarded by a number of medals. We hope that when she is again able to put to sea, she will have fair winds and a summer sea.

Prone Position: Pauline Johnson, James Rust, Bob Haller, Kathleen Scott.

The "MUSKET-TEERS" set sail in October and have had a very successful season.

"The sea was rough, but they had the stuff,

Three victories out of five; wasn't that good enough?"

Upon completion of this eventful voyage, everyone slid down the gangplank to devour some delicious hot dogs, roasted in the school's outdoor oven.

With such distinguished personalities aboard, the ship news proved to be interesting reading at all times. In fact, it was such a whale of a good trip, and so well written up, that it was the winner of International First Place Award given by Quill and Scroll, the national high school journalism organization. Later, the "Advance" had the salt shaken from between its pages and was submitted for a critical survey at the Indiana High School Press Convention held at Franklin College where it was adjudged well done.

HARDY ENSIGNS TAKE OVER THE GALLEY

The Industrial Arts Club lost no time in captivating the promenade deck, and have remained in the limelight throughout the entire year. The highlight of the year was the annual "Stuff" held before Thanksgiving. Mr. Brumit also arranged for some interesting tours of prominent industrial centers in Fort Wayne.

*Instead of setting a cruiser's course,
They are guiding a "hobby" horse.*

Astride their water-shy "hobby" horses, these pirates searched the country for food for their special pet, "hobbies." Along the way, they dismounted to enjoy a puppet show, a skating party, and a Christmas party. A banquet and a hobby exhibit concluded their activities.

PHI-CHEM JOINS SCIENTIFIC MARINERS

Standing: Mr. Wisner, Bill Rowe, Allen Cox, Bob Fiedler, Joyce Albert, Louis Busse, Annie Porter, Miss Wimmer.

Seated' (with backs turned): Arnold Engle, Ralph Miller, Bob Lee, Ernest Bailey, LeMoine Hinshaw.

Seated (facing front): Roger Goble, Jack Harper, James Miller.

After the club voted to affiliate itself with the Junior Academy of Science, a delegation of twenty members attended a state-wide meeting at North Manchester College. During their furlough, these loyal mariners found entertainment in visiting the Filtration Plant, Perfection Biscuit Company, Magnavox, General Electric, Eskay Dairy, and the Gas Plant. A steak fry was their biggest social event. The club also sponsored an all-school amateur contest to raise money to purchase J A S pins.

DEBATERS STOW PRIZE CARGO

Standing: Almeda Cox, Luther Sandwick, Alene Webster, Betty Wickman, David Coil, Miss Varin.

Sitting: Patricia Burgoon, Beth Feagles, Rosemary Pond, William Mason, Joyce Albert, Helen Coil, James Burgoon.

Having cast off with twelve ambitious blue jackets, the Forum Club dropped anchor on November 6 to sponsor a skating party. During the following month, shore leaves included debates at Purdue University, Columbia City, Central High School, Lafayette Central, North Side, and Chester Township.

On May 5, the last night out, all were on deck to enjoy the theatre party which officially ended the cruise. Then, with the prize cargo of third place in the North Eastern Indiana Debating League stowed away in the hold, these victorious sailors steamed triumphantly into the home harbor.

Since sea dogs may be seals, pirates, or privateers and since Trojans always possess pluck and endurance, the lookout was justified in sounding alarm when these brawny beings of the deep hove in sight.

MUSTER ROLL OF THE SCARLET AND GRAY

"Pete"

Dwight P. Byerly took the lumber-some crew through another season at Elmhurst. This is Pete's third year as the Trojan mentor. Our coach is expecting a good team next year.

"Harpo"

Jack Harper has paced the Trojans in scoring this year with 116 points. In his position of back guard he showed his ability in offensive and defensive plays. Jack's graduation will be noticed on next year's team.

"Richy"

Harold Richardson worked his way up from the second team to a regular berth on the varsity. His keen eye for long shots helped the crew out in more than one instance.

"Shorty"

Bob Belschner, a lanky junior, came in handy when we needed the tip. Shorty has developed fast this year, and was usually in the starting lineup at center.

"Rog"

Roger Goble, our student manager, took care of our uniforms for us after each game. Rog is very handy at cutting tape for twisted ankles.

"Bill"

William Rowe, a stocky senior, supplied power when it was needed. A path was usually made when Bill came sailing down the center of the floor. Bill received honorable mention at the County Tourney.

"Engle"

Arnold Engle, a senior floor guard, got down to business and played ball after he got his unbreakable glasses. Engle shared honors with Rowe in the County Tournament.

"Vernie"

Vernon Foulks played most of the season on the second string. Near the end of the season Vernie was put into some games as a guard. Vernie will probably be one of the first five next year.

"Corky"

Bob Kortokrax, otherwise known as Corky, was the lad who helped hold down the floor guard's berth. Corky wears a white star on his left arm for being elected honorary captain by his team mates.

"Rusty"

Roscoe Gebhart, another next year loss, could usually be counted on for a basket or two when he entered the game. Rusty helped the forwards out when they ran into some difficulty.

"Windy"

Wendell Fusselman is only a sophomore, yet this is his second year on the first string. Windy will be an invaluable player next year, if he keeps fighting as he did this year.

"Blackie"

Fred Link, a diminutive freshman, broke into the lineup when he showed his scoring ability at the Blind Tournament. Blackie still needs some drilling in fundamentals; but by all indications, he will develop into a great player.

Whodunnit?

A hush settled over the excited crowd in the shipyard as Helen Schoeneman, the president's famous niece, stepped up to the new schooner "Sinkerswim" constructed from materials from the Waynedale Supply Company, and slugged it with a large bottle of catsup from Noble's Home Store.

Creaking and groaning, the ship rolled slowly down the runway and splashed into the water.

The very natty looking crew, dressed in spotless suits, kept clean by the Model Dry Cleaners, stood at their posts. Captain Kortokrax stood on the bridge, looking slightly green already. His high-powered telescope which had come from Dehler and Hughes was leveled on a beautiful mermaid reclining on a rock far out at sea.

The ship's engine crew, after about three days out on her maiden voyage, reported an engine part missing, so Allen Cox, the ship's cook, was elected to swim back to the mainland and go to Roehm's Garage or the Waynedale Garage for the part. While he was away, the crew would probably have starved if the Furnace and Rainbow ice cream factories had not come to the rescue.

Delmer Grotrian, Carl Springer, James Coleman, and Edwin Lunz developed such stomach aches from the over-indulging in ice cream, that a wireless was sent to Allen to stop at Capin's Grocery and get some substantial grub, and above all some baking soda, or maybe some castor oil from Clapesattle's Drug Store.

Tying these necessities together with two drums of oil which were gifts from the Theo Raney and Son's Standard Station to be used in case of rough seas, Allen started back to the ship.

Whodunnit?

After about two days of swimming, he finally came in sight of the "Sinkerswim." Along side of it was another ship which was flying a black flag with skull and crossbones. On board the new ship swarms of bold, pretty pirates: Katie Wilhoite, Letha Brim, Marian Aschliman, and many others were searching for a treasure. At last they came upon a box marked Koerber's, which contained a beautiful necklace that Second Lieutenant Rust had purchased before sailing, but in his excitement forgot to give to the one and only. All the pirates aboard the strange ship looked very beautiful with their new hair styles from Esther Rae's Beauty Shoppe.

For entertainment an old radio was found, and a good dance orchestra furnished the music while many a person tried his luck at "Truckin'." All at once the ship sprang a leak and began to sink rapidly. The crew of the "Sinkerswim" was transferred to the pirate ship, much to their glee. As the "Sinkerswim" sank out of sight, Captain Kortokrax sighed thankfully, "I'm glad we had her insured at Ray Franke's."

To take their minds off the disaster, the pirates served a lunch patterned after those fine meals served at Davis' Restaurant back home.

Arriving home a few days later, the sailors of the ill-fated "Sinkerswim" were presented floral wreaths from Doswell's and large bouquets from the Sandpoint Greenhouse for capturing the bold pirates who had for long been the terror of the seas.

Now—who done it? The capturing, I mean. The pirates, or the sailors? Figure it out for yourself.
